

Nikko Toshogu Shrine

Closely associated with Tokugawa Ieyasu

Five Storied Pagoda

The Shrines and Temples of Nikko form a single complex composed of one hundred three religious buildings within two Shinto shrines (The Tôshôgû and The Futarasan-jinja) and one Buddhist temple (The Rinnô-ji) located in an outstanding natural setting.

The Nikko shrines and temples are a perfect illustration of the architectural style of the Edo period as applied to Shinto shrines and Buddhist temples

Torii Gate

- The Nikko shrines and temples, together with their environment, are an outstanding example of a traditional Japanese religious center, associated with the Shinto perception of the relationship of man with nature, in which mountains and forests have a sacred meaning and are objects of veneration, in a religious practice that is still very much alive today.
- First buildings were constructed on the slopes of the sacred Nikko mountains by a Buddhist monk in the 8th century.

Buddhist monks at the Torii Gate

Sensoji Temple

The Oldest Temple in Tokyo

Sensoji Temple

Nakamise-dori

Shopping arcade right near the Senjo Temple

Shinto Shrine in Tokyo

Barrels of French wine to be consecrated at the Meiji

Meiji Shrine Entrance and Torii Gate

Cemetery near my hotel The Utsunomiya Tobu Hotel Grande

Washing station at the cemetery

THE TEACHING OF BUDDHA

和英対照仏教聖典

NEW TESTAMENT
新約聖書

財団法人
日本福音プロテスタント協会

Middle school basketball tournament

Tokyo Swallows baseball game

Traditional lunch with my host family

My breakfast at the home of my host family and the bento boxed lunch for the kids

We had so much good food

